The importance of the daily experience of new information and communication technologies is highlighted by this timely volume. The book is based on work carried out in the European Media and Everyday Life Network and is structured around a series of seven empirical case studies drawn from research within Europe. The application of this perspective draws attention not just to the significance of information and communication technologies for a mature understanding of the conduct of everyday life in contemporary Europe, but also to the need for a greater focus on the ways we perform as and for ourselves and each other in virtual spaces. Through a diverse range of topics and examples—including discussions of self-identity, surveillance,金钱, internet memes, storytelling, ritual, political action, and activism—the book addresses how the physical and virtual have become inseparable in everyday life, and how the digital is always rooted in embodied action. For practitioners of personal and public performance and human agency, the authors offer fresh perspectives on communication and digital culture. The unique, interdisciplinary approach of this book will be useful to scholars, artists, and activists in communication, digital media studies, theatre, sociology, political science, information technology, and cybersecurity—along with anyone interested in how communication shapes and is shaped by digital technologies.

The Qualified Self - Luke Humphreys - 2018-04-02

How sharing the mundane details of daily life did not start with Facebook, Twitter, and YouTube but with pocket diaries, photo albums, and baby books. Social critiques argue that social media have made us narcissistic; that Facebook, Instagram, and YouTube are all vehicles for self-promotion. In The Qualified Self, Luke Humphreys shows that sharing the mundane details of our lives—what we ate for lunch, where we went on vacation, who dropped in for a visit—doesn’t begin with mobile devices and social media. People have used media to catalog and share their lives for centuries. Pocket diaries, photo albums, and baby books are the predigital precursors of today’s digital and mobile platforms for posting text and images. The ability to take selfies has not turned us into narcissistic people; it’s a part of a longer story about how people account for everyday life. Humphreys compares the digital and nondigital forms, media accounting. The sense of self that emerges from media accounting is not the purely narcissistic self, but the well-rounded, qualified self. We come to understand ourselves in a new way through the representations of ourselves that we create to be consumed.
